The same family has owned and operated the Hotel Harrington in Washington, D.C., since 1914. The hotel has an underground parking garage, gift shop and a laundromat. There are two on-site full-service restaurants and a connected bar. Located within short walking distance to the White House and the National Mall, this 242-room property was an innovation leader right from the beginning designing hotels guestrooms to include a private bath and incorporating dedicated space for traveling salesman to display products to local businesses. Being so successful, the property expanded twice in the first ten years.

Continuing to be the innovation leader, Hotel Harrington was the first hotel in DC to install air conditioning in 1938 and 12 stories being a skyscraper by DC standards, the Harrington was the ideal location for the city's first television station and transmission tower. DuMont Corporation's W3XWT (now known as Fox Channel 5) set up shop on the upper floors and in 1946 began broadcasting about 20 hours of programming a week.

Now, under its fifth generation of descendant ownership and preparing for the next hundred years, they are installing the latest in PBX technology. Pinnacle is installing ComXchange, by 360Networks, with all the modern bells and whistles.

“One of the bonus rewards of what we do is the opportunity to be involved with truly special landmarks like this one,” says Bill Mitchell, Pinnacle CEO/VP Cloud Solutions, “we have been doing more and more of these remarkable properties and it’s really interesting to get to know and understand the history.”
